Difference between Clear and Starphire glass

Colour difference between front and back surfaces of a glass splashback

Starphire (Low Iron) vs Clear Glass

Standard clear glass contains a certain amount of iron which appears green in colour. If you require colour accuracy for your colour backed glass, we recommend selecting Starphire (low iron) glass, as it contains less iron than standard clear glass, and will therefore appear to have less of a green tint.

Colour Variation

The paint used on the back surface of the glass is perfectly matched to colour samples or swatches provided. There will always be a variation in colour on the front surface of the splashback when viewing the paint through the glass, ie, with the use of Starphire glass, there will always be a slight green tinge to the colour. This is even more prevalent where lighter colours are selected.

Made to Measure

Our fabricated Splashbacks are made to measure and typically accommodate fixtures and fittings (as shown in this drawing).
